

Rob Martyr

Rob has over ten years' experience working for conservation charities and local authorities, including the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, Wildlife Trusts, Wildfowl and Wetlands Trust and Keep Britain Tidy. His roles have included Senior Environmental Project Officer and Senior Reserve Warden leading on management planning, environmental stewardship and practical habitat management. He has an MSc in Countryside Management and specialises in wetland nature reserves and habitat creation and restoration projects, including designing wetlands. This has involved fund raising, project managing, post-project monitoring. He has also worked with over 40 environmental volunteer community groups and organised a variety of volunteer training programs for surveying both native and non-native flora and fauna, and for citizen science environmental projects.
