

Pete Fox

An early interest in natural history and conservation led Pete to do a degree in ecology. Subsequently he has worked in conservation in a voluntary capacity or as a conservation contractor for most of his working life. The majority of the work he has done has been in East Anglia and includes much heathland and wetland management. He has been an LOHP trustee and honorary secretary since 2012. Aside from conservation he has interests in cooperative housing and was a founder member of Nautia Housing co-operative and Common Ground, a land based co-operative.
