

Dr Rowena Langston

Rowena is a Founder Member of the LOHP and has been one of the voluntary wardens of Hinderclay Fen since 1998. She has recently retired from her post of Principal Research Biologist with the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) having worked in the field of conservation science, as an ornithologist, for nearly 30 years. She provided scientific advice to staff in the RSPB, BirdLife International and partner organisations, government departments and industry and is an experienced public speaker, negotiator, people and project manager with a good publications record both of scientific and more popular items. She also maintains an active interest in practical conservation work, bird ringing and biological surveys especially on LOHP sites.